

Norman Turner

Norman Turner is an award winning photographer born and raised in Lake County, IN. When he is not photographing a wedding or taking portraits, he can be found taking blue light pictures of his beloved downtown Chicago or leading a group of aspiring photographers on photo excursions throughout the region. Norman loves photographing lighthouses and bald eagles and most recently has created a unique series of waterdrop images. But without a doubt his greatest passion is taking pictures of America's vast landscapes and national parks. This love has taken him to 43 of 50 states including Hawaii and Alaska. He names Yosemite National Park as the most beautiful place he's ever seen with Horseshoe Bend in Page, AZ. coming in a close second. Norman has lead several workshops on photo adventures and frequently offers his free time to tutor and share his love of photography with others. He is a two time winner of the Michiana Professional Photographers "Photographer of the year award". His images have been featured in many newspaper articles and have been exhibited and sold in art galleries throughout northern Indiana, eastern Illinois and southern Michigan.
